Tarp Drainer

A simple way to keep tarpaulins water free!

The Tarp Drainer works by draining away the pools of water that collect on top of your tarp. They are easy to attach; simply cut a hole in the tarpaulin and attach the eyelet using a rubber mallet. Then fasten the elbow and hose to the bottom and direct the water wherever you want it to go. You could even store the water and use it on the garden. This product can help your tarp stay stronger for longer since the weight of water on top of a tarp can put a strain on it and eventually reduce its strength.

2.5m hose.

“ Super, brilliant, thick strong product, quick delivery. ”

Monotex Tarpaulins

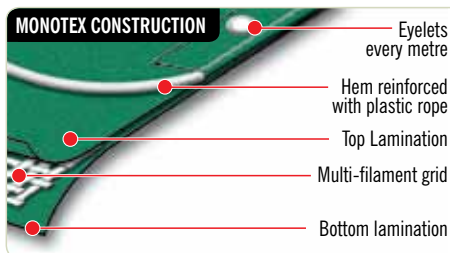

Monotex Industrial Strength Tarpaulin

Monotex tarpaulins are incredibly strong and are suitable for use in the toughest of environments. The secret of their strength lies in a grid of ropes that are sandwiched between two thick, hardwearing polyethylene sheets, making them virtually indestructible.

This extra-strong construction results in a tarpaulin which will provide long-lasting protection. The sheer strength and waterproof qualities of Monotex make it ideal as a temporary roof covering (in fact, many of our customers are roofing contractors).

These are the heaviest of our tarpaulins, but are still easy to manage on-site and since they don't absorb water they stay easy to handle when wet. Clear Monotex is almost entirely see-through. This makes it the ideal choice when you need to work under a cover but still want plenty of light to come through. Many of our customers use these to cover their boats when they want to work on them in winter, or on market stalls so that customers can see the products in natural light. Monotex is available in clear or green and in 14 sizes. All our tarpaulins are UV protected to remain both waterproof and rot free for 18 months.

- Green Monotex is popular with the building trade for construction.
- Clear is great as temporary roofing as it lets plenty of light through.
- Double edged rope reinforced hems.
- Eyelets every metre.
